This Morning's Bulletin.

The following was issued this morning:
EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 24, 8:30 a. m.—The President has passed a very good night, awakening at longer intervals than during the several nights past. He continues to take fiquid food by the mouth with more relish, and in such quantity that the enemata will be suspended for the present. No change has yet been observed in the parotid swelling. The other symptoms are quite as favorable as yesterday. Pulse,

FRANK H. HAMILTON.

Very Little Change to Report.

There is very little change to report this morning in the President's case. Last night the case was thought to be more encouraging as was Indicated by the following dispatch of Mr. Blaine to Minister Lowell:

"Lowell, Minister, London:

"The President's condition is more encouraging than it was at this time last "Lowell, Minister, London:

"The President's condition is more encouraging than it was at this time last night. During the last twenty-four hours he has swallowed ten ounces extract of beef and eighteen ounces of milk, retaining and digosting both. He has twice asked for food, which he has not done before for several days. Pulse and temperature are both somewhat lower. The swelling of the parotid gland has not specially changed. Its long continuance at present stage increases fear of suppuration. At this hour (11 o'clock) physicians report that the President has rested quietly the entire evening.

The Patient's Weight.

Dr. Susan Edson, the President's nurse, in speaking on the subject, said Mr. Blaine's statement of the decrease in the President's weight was as near as any one in the sickroom could estimate it. She says his arms are no thicker than his wrists were when he was stont, and his limbs hardly any thicker than the arm of an ordinarily stout man. He suffers but little pain when the wound is being dressed. She was account.

room is a pillow made in four sections. It is covered with kid and is composed of down. Over all is a cover of brocaded silk. It was sent by a lady who did not send her name. It is a source of great comfort to the President, as by doubling up the sections the head can be raised alightly, thus giving him a rest by changing his position. Occasionally his feet are raised, which is also a restful position for him. He can lie on this pillow on his right side, as the swelling on the side of his neck and jaw finds a pleasant place in the division. He is now able to move his head and change it about till he finds a comfortable position. One of the few pleasant things about his illness, Mrs. Edson says, has been the anticipation of his every want by those on the outside, this pillow arriving just as it was most needed. The President is seldom thirsty, but when he is he finds relief by the kommiss, in the place of the water or melted ice which he formerly took.

What an Army Nurgeon Says.

What an Army Surgeon Says.

An army surgeon said yesterday that he had it from a reliable source that the President was unable to recognize his wife Monday and at times yesterday. He seemed to be in a dazed condition. "Nourishment," he said, "may keep him alive for some days yet, but there is nothing on which he can build a final recovery. The splendid physique that he had is gone, and he is now but a skeleton compared to what he

A large number of the President's personal friends, including some members of the Cabinet, still entertain the opinion that his chances for recovery would improve very much if he could be removed to the Soldiers' Home or placed upon the United States steamship Takiapoosa and taken down to Fortress Monroe. They have urged this course upon the physicians, but the latter are evidently afraid to assume the responsibility of making any change until the President has had rather a quiet day sions of a change in his condition. He is slightly better than yesterday and no unfavorable symptoms have yet manifested themselves. The capricious stomach has acted well so far, and there has been no recurrence of nausea or vomiting. He had taken and retained Thirteen and a-Half Ounces of Food must at the locks to day. The food exercised bility of making any change until the President gets stronger.

The President frets about his confinement continuously, and constantly wants to know when he can be taken away from the White House. It is thought he believes himself that he would do better if a change could be made, and the doctors have to give him evasive answers every time he mentions the subject.

Mr. Justice Harlan, who was at the White House yesterday, said, in his judgment, the President ought to have been moved before this and taken to the steamer on a bed carried by men drilled for the purpose. It was this and taken to the steamer on a bed carried by men drilled for the purpose. It was a mistake, he thought, not to have allowed the President to have seen some new faces occasionally, and thus divert his mind from his sickness. If Secretary Blaine could have been admitted to his room once a day the effect would, in his opinion, have been beneficial ficial.

What the Secretary of the Navy Says.

The Secretary of the Navy yesterday afternoon said to a newsgatherer that he had not acted on a cortain matter which the reporter inquired about, and that, in fact, he had for the past few days done nothing officially, except to act upon the necessary routine of the Department. He said that he was too much worried by the present condition of the President to think of much else. He said that he had been very hopeful of the recovery of the President until Sunday afternoon, when they (the Cabinet) were first told of the state of the President's mental condition as connected with his wound. The flightness and wandering of mind was the first thing that had really alarmed him. It was a sign of weakness that alarmed the medical attendants. Before this Gen. Garfield had at all times had full possession of his mind, except at some times of waking, such as a man may having when in good health. "I have felt hopeful all the time until pow," he said; "but now I feel very mournful and sadly discouraged for the first time. Yet I hope for the best,"

To-day's Bulletin Claimed to be a

To-day's Bulletin Claimed to be a Good One.

Good One.

The bulletin this morning is probably the best one issued this week. The President has improved a little during the past three days, and there is now a gleam of hope that he may continue to do so, and finally recover. There is a chance of his recovery and that is all. There are so many dangers to be feared and averted and should any of them arise, the consequences could scarcely fail to prove fatal. The bulletin of this morning is as conservative as usual. It tells morning is as conservative as usual. It tells that the President had a good night, that there has been there has been

No Recurrence of Nausea

or vomiting, and that the parotid swelling remains about the same. The pulse, temperature and respiration are substantially the same as on yesterday morning. The inflamed gland is now held responsible for the high pulse, as it keeps the patient in a feverish state. The best thing that has yet occurred in that connection took place this morning, when the patient, on two separate occasions, raised the phlegm himself and spat it out without any trouble. Heretofore this operation of clearing the mouth was always attended with more or less difficulty. The free action of this morning is looked upon as a very favorable symptom.

A Good Night's Rest.

The President slept well during the night,

A Good Night's Rest.

The President slept well during the night, and was not much disturbed by the inflamed gland. He did not require attention from the physicians from 11 p.m. till 3 o'clock this morning, and then only to be given an enema and to take a drink. Dr. Bliss arose about 6 o'clock and went to the President's bedsude. He had just awakened. The Doctor warmed about four onnees of beef extract and gave it to him. It was swallowed without any trouble. Dr. Boynton afterwards came and sat down by the President, who had again fallen asleep. Dr. Bliss states that when he came back he quietly inquired of Dr. Boynton, "Have you noticed any of that disturbance this morning?" referring to any wandering of his mind. "No," was the reply. The President then looked up and asked, "What disturbance do you refer to?" "Why your throat," said Dr. Bliss, evasively. The patient then put his hand on the swelling and said, "It's as hard as a rock, but doesn't bother me much." This conversation took place just as the President had awakened, and showed conclusively that his mind was not much clouded.

Inanition the Great Danger Now. "How is the swollen gland?" Dr. Bliss was asked this morning just before the dressing.

"Have not examined it yet," said he,
"but it looks better around the edges."

"but it looks better around the edges."

"Think it will supporate?"
"No sigus yet, but it may."
"Is it not possible for it to disappear without suppuration?"
"Yes, and I wish it would."
"Does the President seem anxious about his condition?"
"He asks me every day what I think shout him and I always rive him a chapeful too agreed with him that the great trouble to be feared was "inanition." "Nourish-ment is what we need," said he, "and it looks now as if we would bring him up again."

The President's wound was dressed about 9 o'clock. It was found to be doing well. The pus discharge was healthy. Dr. Bliss said that the inflamed gland seems to be softening a little and to give slight evi-dence of coming suppuration. The Noonday Bulletin. The noonday bulletin was as 1011.12.30 p. EXECUTIVE MANSION, Aug. 24, 12:30 p. a.—The President continues to take liquid as reported in the last The noonday bulletin was as follows:

J. K. BARNES, J. J. ROBT. REYBURN. Bulletin Considered Favorable. The bulletin is considered rather favorable under the circumstances. The President is certainly no worse, and there has been a slight change for the better within the past two days. Should the improve-ment continue without any drawback, there would undoubtedly be good ground for hope. But the least drawback might result disastrously and upset the slow work of repair of the last two days.

Nothing is said in the bulletin of the pavotid gland. The increase in the temperature is most probably due to the irritation of that gland by the act of suppuration which is generally believed to have set in. A Quiet Day.

up to 11 o'clock to-day. The food consisted of beef juice and peptonized milk and so far as known was perfectly assimilated. The troublesome gland is still about the same. It is a trifle softer to the touch and this is taken as an evidence that suppuration is in progress. Dr. Bliss states that

If an Abscess Should Result

If an Abscess Should Result from this gland the pus could be easily removed by a simple operation, and without much pain or inconvenience to the patient. The feeling at the White House to-day is more hopeful than it has been this week. The Cabinet officers called as usual this morning, and appeared encouraged at the information gained. Secretary Blaine is very seldom at the White House, and only comes when there is great danger. He has not called since Monday. He is kept promptly advised of the situation, however, by telephone, and frequently has talks with one of the physicians in that way. Dr. Woodward is called for more by the Secretary than any of the others. Senor Romero, Hon. Walter M. Rateman, of Ohio, and Judge Wylie were among the callers to-day.
